Research Proposal (PGR2)  Guidelines for Applicants for the PhD programme in the Faculty of Business, Economics and Law

1. Background and significance of the research
   Introduce the topic of the research and why the research is important.

2. Brief literature review and theoretical base for the research
   Provide an overview of the key literature and theories that are most important to the topic, demonstrating your understanding of the research issues, and highlighting key gap(s) in the literature that your research addresses.

3. Research question
   Clearly define the question the research intends to address.

4. Research design – brief outline of the potential methodology and methods to be employed in the study
   Provide a description of which research methodology will likely be employed to answer the research question, identifying the likely sources of data, and methods used for collecting and analysing data?