

AK1060 Master of Business

Graduate Profile for the Master of Business, Information Systems specialisation

In addition to achieving the broader outcome of the Master of Business, a graduate of the Information Systems specialisation will be able to:

- a. Critically review relevant information systems literature to demonstrate advanced knowledge about a specialist topic or field. (Knowledge/Understanding)
- b. Apply appropriate theories and methodologies to complete an individual scholarly body of work and make contribution to the field. (Personal/Intellectual Autonomy)
- c. Critically evaluate the implications of information systems design, use, control and governance decisions on individuals, organisations and society. (Ethical/Professional Dispositions)
- d. Define information system problems, formulate research questions, employ appropriate theory and methodology to answer research questions that are mainly of interest to academia. (Inquiry/Research/Creativity)
- e. Apply research skills such as systematic literature review, quantitative or qualitative methods to analyse data and interpret results. (Skills/Application)
- f. Communicate research findings effectively to appropriate audience. (Communication)